

CURRENT ONCOLOGY

A Canadian Cancer Research Journal

As Current Oncology transitions into 2021 under new ownership, we at Multimed Inc. reflect proudly on how we began, where we are today, and our contributions to the field of oncology, in Canada, and worldwide. None of this could have been accomplished without:

Our Community. We forged relationships with Canadian associations and organizations to ensure that we were publishing content that would benefit the Canadian oncology community.

Our Partnerships. Together with our partners, we have provided benefit to all through the dissemination of scientific, peer-reviewed research.

Our Authors. You trusted us to publish your important work, now recognized worldwide as evidenced by our acceptance into MEDLINE and a continuously improving impact factor.

Our Reviewers. Your selfless commitment and dedication have been integral to ensuring that we continued to meet the highest possible standards, in each and every issue, over the past 27 years. We are grateful for all that you have done in support of our collective mission.

Our Editorial Team. We were fortunate to have collaborated with exceptional Editors and Editorial Board members over the past 27 years, without whom the Journal could not have achieved its reputation for quality and excellence. Your guidance, passion and tireless support has led to Current Oncology being recognized as Canada's premier cancer research journal.

Multimed Inc. is proud of the journal's accomplishments and grateful for the efforts of all those who contributed to its growth over the years. We wish the new publisher, MDPI, much continued success as it works to expand the global reach of the Journal.